I went to Singapore on my own for a ten-day summer course. There were about 15 students from China, Malaysia, Cambodia, India, and Iran in the course. We were all so surprised about the cleanliness and discipline of the country. On the second day of the course, we had special team-building activities. We worked in groups of five from different countries to search for a location on a map that the school staff gave us. The time we spent doing the activity together was really memorable. We discussed how to find the place. After four hours of walking, taking the bus and metro as well as getting lost, we arrived at the destination. Over the remaining days, we attended English lessons. We worked on projects and culture workshops. We discussed and shared our own traditions and customs. During the time here, we also visited the Botanic Gardens, took photos in the orchard garden and explored Chinatown where we bought souvenirs for our parents and friends. At the weekend, we went to the Discovery Centre. We were impressed by the attraction and interactive gallery as well as the brilliant learning experiences we had. After the trip, I felt proud of myself for being able to go without my parents and leaving my comfort zone.

Children's playtime and activities in Vietnam changed (19)_____ from previous generations. Decades ago, children spent most of (20)_____ free time playing traditional games like tug-of-war, hide-and-seek, and kite flying in open fields or village squares. These outdoor activities, (21)_____ not only provided physical exercise but also fostered a sense of community among children, were an integral part of growing up in Vietnam. (22)_____, the rise of (23)_____ devices has revolutionized the way children spend their leisure time. Today, many young people are more likely to be found indoors, engaging with video games, social media, or online learning platforms. Although these devices offer educational benefits and access to (24)_____ wealth of information, they have also contributed to a more sedentary lifestyle. Moreover, the shift from outdoor to indoor play has resulted in fewer opportunities for children to develop social skills and build relationships with their peers in a traditional setting.
